

Learning Activity:

LEARNING OBJECTIVES	EXPANDED CONTENT OUTLINE
The learner will be able to identify critical issues needed to be addressed in planning an international nursing research study	We will present critical issues in the process of international study, such as planning and formulation of an international study or forming an international research group etc. (based on our study example)
The learner will be able to describe different strategies helping to overcome barriers in international nursing research study.	We will present strategies we used in our study, such as translating questionnaire methods or adjusting recruitment and data collection methods, in order to overcome some of the challenges and barriers related to conducting an international study
The learner will be able to apply different solutions to minimize problems related to international nursing research study.	We will talk about practical aspects of applying the available strategies to minimize the impact of barriers and challenges related to the inter-country differences. Moreover, we will present 'lessons learned' which will extend the learners' understanding of those strategies' application.
